

MONOCAUSAL THEORIES OF MORALITY

A number of mono (uni?) causal theories of morality have been proposed: that it is determined by

- climate (ecological)
- early toilet training (+)
- political system (political)
- economy (mode of subsistence)
- innate propensity to goodness (+)
- total population density (demographic)
- racial
- religion
- the media (especially literature & TV)

Methdological problem. Every one of these views has confirmed - and refuted. This suggests that ~~the~~ morality has a number of determinants - though not all of the above-mentioned ones.

$$\frac{d\psi_{\alpha\beta}}{dt} = \frac{\partial}{\partial t}\psi_{\alpha\beta}$$