There is no greater moral problem in the world today than the nuclear threat to humanity. Needless to say, there is no dearth of moral problems in the modern world, but unless we solve the nuclear threat to humanity, there will be no more moral problems because there will be no more human beings to have problems. Once nuclear war begins, all other human problems are moot. Because of this simple fact, the elimination of the nuclear threat to humanity must be at the top of everyone's list of moral problems.

All best wishes.

Cordially yours,

1985
