

IMMORALITY OF GAMBLING

Gambling is not the same as taking chances. We cannot help taking chances as long as we live, but gambling can always be avoided. Ant it must be avoided because it is either stupid or immoral. Gambling is stupid whenever the chances of winning are either unknown or known to be slim. Gambling is immoral when in the possession of information to which the ga,bling partner is not privy, and which ensures our winning.

The state has no right to interfere with private gambling, but it does have the ^{moral}right to ~~xxxxxxx~~ outlaw gambling casinos, where crooks flourish and the house always wins in the last resort.
