

PRACTICAL IMPORTANCE OF RELATIVISM AS VALUE JUDGMENTS
AXIOLOGICAL SUBJECTIVISM

Max Weber was being self-contradictory when advocating at the same time the subjectivity of all valuations and social reform. The propositions "Poverty is bad for society at large as well as for the poor", and "The right to work is at least as important as the right to vote", are not matters of taste: they are true statements of fact. Likewise, "War is a crime, and unlimited nuclear war is the ultimate crime", is not a subjective impression.

In. 83723

FT 384